Regents vote to raise tuition, room charges for '81-82

The Board of Regents approved the request of Dr. Donald Darnton, college president, to increase the incidental fees of all students for the upcoming fall semester. The Board also approved an "unlimited" seconds food program for residence students which will also bring a cost increase for students living in the campus facilities.

The incidental fees for the upcoming fall semester will be $235 for a full-time student who is a Missouri resident. This is a 6.8 percent increase from the current fee of $220. Part-time students who are Missouri residents will be charged $21 per credit hour.

Incidental fees for out-of-state students will be $470 per semester and $36 per semester hour for part-time students.

DARNTON TOLD the Board that this increase in fees would bring Missouri Southern in close proximity with the Missouri legislature request that 25 percent of the funds to run an institution come from the charge of fees and the surrounding community. This increase in fees would place Southern on the 23 percent level.

When questioned if Southern could cut its budget in order to avoid a fee increase, Darnton said that a cut in the budget would not be in the best interest of the quality of the student's education.

Darnton also said that Southern was in the middle of the price range compared with other institutions in the state. He also thought that the price increase would show the Missouri legislature that Southern was making an attempt to reach the 75 percent, 25 percent funding breakdown.

AFTER THE MOTION was passed Darnton emphasized that the scholarship program would have to be "placed on the front burner" in order to make up for the increase in the fees and the possibility of the elimination of some funds for financial aid programs.

Several Board members wanted to know if the cost of additional texts that are required for a course but were not provided by the book rental service was becoming too much of a burden for the students.

Dr. Floyd Belk, vice president for academic affairs, said that no teacher can require a student to buy more than a total of $15 worth of additional texts without his approval. He also said that most of the classes that needed additional texts were concentrated in literature and consisted of paperbacks.

DARNTON FELT that the faculty was very concerned about this matter and would not place additional costs upon students unless beneficial to the class.

The room and board fee that is charged to students who live in dormitories was raised by 15 percent to $650 a semester. This will be the cost for a double occupancy room in Webster Hall, South Hall and the annexes. This price will be the same for the five new dormitories with five students per suite.

The Board approved the proposal of an "unlimited seconds" food program for resident students. This program will give students the opportunity to go back as many times as they wish for additional entrees and side orders at every meal. The program would still not include an evening meal on Sundays.

SEVERAL MEMBERS of the Board felt that this increase in price might not be acceptable to resident students. But Dr. Glenn Dolence, dean of student services, said that the students had no disapproval of a price increase if they would receive an increase in the amount of food allowed per meal.

Several Board members asked Dolence about the possibility of a food plan with a smaller number of meals per week.

Dolence said that the limited number of resident students hampered the feasibility of such a plan. He also said that a 20-meal-a-week food program with a four ounce entree would only be $3 cheaper per semester than the "unlimited" seconds program.

DOLENCE ALSO commented that the resident halls are at a 95 percent occupancy rate currently. He said that 43 new occupants have moved into the facilities making up for the loss of 50 students at the end of the first semester.

Darnton also discussed the progress on the new evaluation system that must be presented to the Board at its April meeting.

Darnton said that he is currently in the process of discussion with department heads and deans on campus in setting up a system. Darnton suggested that the process that comes from this would be implemented on a trial basis during the 1981-1982 school year.

DARNTON FELT that it would be wise to try the system first on a trial basis before attaching it to the pay system. He also believes that this trial basis would give the faculty an opportunity to gain some faith in the new system.

The final business of the meeting was the accepting of the resignations of Ce Ce Chamberlin and Ray Minkler and the acceptance of Dr. Robert Smith's resignation as head of the department of social sciences at the end of the summer session. But Dr. Smith will remain as an associate professor of history.

The Board accepted all of the resignations. The tentative date for the next Board meeting was set for March 20.

NEA releases votes on 3 administrators

Missouri Southern's Chapter of the National Education Association has released the results of the vote of confidence in the college's three central administrators.

After the results were tabulated, 39.5 percent (43 votes) said they had confidence in Dr. Donald Darnton, president, and 54.1 percent (59 votes) did not.

Dr. Floyd Belk, vice president for academic affairs, had 24.8 percent (27 votes) of the faculty showing confidence and 73.4 percent (80 votes) without confidence.

Dr. Paul Shipman, vice president for business affairs, had 25.7 percent (28 votes) showing confidence and 70.6 percent (77 votes) showing no confidence.

The distribution, collection, and tabulation were handled by James D. Hardy, certified public accountant. Of 143 ballots were sent to all full-time faculty, librarians, and coaches, 109 were returned properly, 33 were not returned, and one was returned incorrectly.

"Today we will be sending a letter to the Board of Regents that will state the reason for the vote, the results, and our call for action," said Rochelle Boehning, president of the Missouri Southern NEA. "In our letter we will also ask the Board to meet with the faculty as we have asked in the past."

At a meeting today of Missouri Southern's NEA the results will be released to the local media. Plans for future action will also be discussed. Boehning believed that some of the NEA members would be going to Springfield this weekend.

"This weekend the legislators from this part of the state will come together for a conference. We are hoping to get our point across that Missouri needs to spend more funds on education or they will lose quality teachers," said Boehning. "Some of our members are planning to go to Jefferson City on March 18, for the Missouri NEA rally to protest the governor's recommendations for the next fiscal year."

Nominations being taken for outstanding teachers

Nominations for the Outstanding Teaching Awards are due March 28, according to Dr. Floyd Belk, vice president for academic affairs. It is the second year that the teaching awards—two awards, Outstanding Teacher Award and the Outstanding Teacher of a Freshman Class Award—are to be presented. A $1,000 prize, given by the Missouri Southern State College Foundation, will accompany the award.

Nominations may be made by faculty, alumni, and students. Forms for nominations may be picked up in any major building on campus. Two forms exist, yellow forms for the general teaching award and pink forms for the teachers of freshman classes. A freshman class is defined as any course numbered 200 or below.

The forms, once completed, must be sent to the Dean of Students Office or the Academic Affairs Office no later than March 28, 1981.

To be eligible a faculty member must teach at least six credit hours a semester and be in at least the third year of teaching at Missouri Southern.

An ad hoc committee composed of emeritus faculty will select the winners of the two awards.

Last year Dr. Larry Martin, head of the department of mathematics, was selected as the outstanding teacher and Mrs. Grace Mitchell, assistant professor of English, was selected as the outstanding teacher of a freshman class.

The Outstanding Teaching Award winners will be announced during the May graduation ceremonies.

Lions host Avila in opener of District 16 playoffs

Missouri Southern's basketball Lions will host Avila College of Kansas City at 7:30 p.m. Saturday in an opening-round game of the NAIA District 16 post-season playoffs.

In other first-round action, Rockhurst entertains either Evangel or School of the Ozarks, Central Methodist plays at Southwest Baptist and Drury hosts Missouri Baptist. School of the Ozarks and Missouri Baptist meet tonight to determine the Ozark Collegiate Conference champion. The conference champion automatically advances to the district playoffs.

Rockhurst (23-3) was ranked first in the final Dunkle Ratings with a 48.9 power rating. Southwest Baptist (24-7) was second with 46.7, followed by Drury, 46.5; Southern, 46.1; Avila, 41.6; Missouri Baptist, 35.8; Central Methodist, 34.2, and Evangel, 34.1.

"WE'RE HAVING to play the toughest team among the lower four," said Coach Chuck Williams. "Avila has a very talented team. On any given night, they can beat practically anyone. Avila has defeated Drury twice and Rockhurst once."

Avila, who defeated Baker University 67-54 Tuesday night, is led by 6-4 junior guard Baxter Jones. He sports a 16.5 scoring and 6.5 rebound average. Mark Hatchett, 6-5 junior forward, also chips in 11 points a game. 6-5 senior Orvstin Candler leads the Avalanche in rebounds with a 7.2 average.

"They have some real good shooters," said Williams, "and good size inside. I anticipate a tough game. Avila is very capable and has won around 20 games. I don't want us to take them lightly and look ahead to Rockhurst."

WINNERS of Saturday's first-round games advance to the semifinals on Monday at the sites of the highest-ranking survivors. The championship game is scheduled for Wednesday on the home floor of the highest-ranking survivor.

If Southern and Rockhurst are both victorious Saturday, the Lions would face the Hawks at 7:45 Monday in Mason-Halpin Fieldhouse in Kansas City. "It doesn't make much difference who you play at this stage," said Williams. "Playing on the road doesn't effect us much."

Trenches being dug around campus are for the new coaxial cable system to link the computer center and the TV laboratory with campus buildings.

They're digging for the cable system

Linthicum Construction Company is laying coaxial cables in the central circular area of Missouri Southern's campus, connecting the new computer system and closed circuit television system to various buildings.

Underground conduits will hook computer terminals to be used for administrative and instructional purposes in Reynolds Hall, the Library, Business, and Hearnes Hall with the computer center and the new television laboratory.

Cathode ray computer terminals will allow information stored in the computer to be read when called. Administrative officials will be able to enter accounting records, and some terminals will have printouts able to copy information on paper.

Communication classes will be using the new television laboratory, as will other departments, and the new cable hookup will allow programs originating in the studio to be broadcast to each of the buildings.

Computer students will be able to enter programs without cards and with the location of terminals will be able to work in buildings other than Matthews Hall.

Eventually registration will be improved by use of the terminals and can be used to verify class size. Steve Gardner, a computer science major, said, "It will improve registration drastically. There won't be any more cards to carry away and lose. With the terminals, students have the capabilities of typing programs and seeing them without cards."

Tutoring programs will be available under "computer assisted instruction" where programs are written to ask students questions and allow time for response. According to Robert Mammen, instructor of computer science, these programs will not do away with teachers.

Other construction on campus involves recaulking around marble panels of older buildings to prevent moisture from seeping through. Some of the buildings are 13-14 years old.

Bids will be opened at 2 p.m. Thursday, March 12 to replace some broken marble on some of the older buildings also.

Greenhouse next on construction list

Bids for construction of a passive solar greenhouse, authorized last year by the state legislature, were opened last Friday. Six bids were received, the lowest being Dalton Killigmer Construction Company with a bid of $44,773.

Connecting to the east end of the maintenance building, the greenhouse will consist of three separate, side by side, modules, each 12 feet by 16 feet.

Each module will serve a different purpose. One will be used by campus landscape workers for growing and transplanting shrubs and flowers.

Dr. James Jackson, assistant professor of biology, plans to bring exotic plants from the Denver Botanical Gardens in Colorado to house in another section of the greenhouse. This section will be open to all students and may include such plants as banana palms and orchids.

THE THIRD SECTION will be a workroom, set aside for plant propagation and plant physiology, to be used by classes, students, and faculty.

Plans for a headhouse area, consisting of a workroom and lecture room are also included. Next semester, plant physiology will be offered as a new class, and will probably meet in this section.

According to Dr. William Ferron, head of the biology department, "passive solar" is the most energy efficient type of greenhouse that can be made. It is designed to save energy.

WORKING UNDER a "solar climate controlled system" hot air is collected at the top of the greenhouse, then blown through ductwork and recirculating fan to a gravel heat storage bed on the floor. Summer use circulates cooler air through the gravel, and disperses hotter air out through roof vents and fans.

When solar heat is not enough, gas heaters will be used. Heat can be stored in the gravel bed requiring gas heat only on the coldest, cloudiest days.

Walls for the greenhouse will be shatterproof double-walled G.E. Lexan panels. Sunlight diffuses through these panels allowing even light distribution and better plant growth.

504 renovations get underway

With the receiving of the Office of Civil Rights review of the Missouri Southern campus, several handicap reconstruction projects have begun on campus. A total of $59,000 will be spent for these projects, with an additional $35,000 coming from the general repair budget.

These projects, it is hoped, will bring Missouri Southern closer to compliance with Federal 504, a regulation that says handicapped students should have total access to all programs offered by the college.

"The ORC report indicated there were some things that needed to be corrected, but nothing major," said Dr. Donald Darnton, president of the college.

THE BIGGEST PROBLEMS, said Dr. Paul Shipman, vice president for business affairs, were restrooms and the need for elevators in some buildings. Kuhn Hall, the Fine Arts Complex, Library, and Gene Taylor Education-Psychology Building all need the installation or relocation of elevators.

But due to a lack of funding, projects such as the installation of elevators will be delayed.

"Restrooms are very expensive to redo," said Shipman. "The latest buildings do not require renovation. Older buildings, however, will have to be done selectively because there are not enough funds to redo each bathroom."

ALSO, WATER fountains must be placed at a specific height. In an attempt to save the cost of moving the water fountains on campus, paper cup dispensers will be placed by water fountains for handicapped students on a trial basis.

Handicapped parking is also being added around campus with stricter enforcement expected.

There is also a need for audio and visual fire alarm systems for blind and deaf students. Also, room numbers readable by the blind will have to be installed.

DARNTON SAID that for this year piece work would begin on rest room renovations and elevators, although this could be delayed because of funding.

If compliance to Federal 504 is not met there is the possibility of losing all federal funds. This would include much of the college's student aid budget.

Yet Darnton did not expect this to happen.

Seminar discusses world food

World hunger and the problems of meeting world food needs were topics of a seminar held this morning in the Billingsly Student Center.

Guest speakers were scheduled at 9, 10, and 11. Speakers were focusing on both economic and production aspects of world food problems.

Dr. Harold Breimyer, with the agricultural economic department of the University of Missouri-Columbia, discussed economic aspects of world food problems. He is an expert on general agricultural economic policies and has served on several government agencies in the field.

Jim Schoeberl, a former Southern student, discussed food production in developing countries. Being the son of a local physician, Schoeberl was also expected to discuss nutritional and medical aspects as well.

Schoeberl served two years in the Peace Corps in Bozoum in the Central African Empire. He helped African farmers restore their ponds and taught them ways of raising fish to improve the protein in the diet of the people. He currently specializes in limnology, the study of fish and streams, at UMC.

Dr. Dale Kirkham, who taught biology at Southern for five years, discussed management procedures of forage lands. Because range business is big in Missouri his discussion involved some local aspects. Kirkham is currently the federal soil and water conservation agent for Elk and Chataugua counties in Kansas. He recently received word that he will be transferred to a different zone in Kansas in the near future.

Coordinators of the seminar were Dr. Gerry Elick and Dr. Orty Orr, both of the biology department. Both attended a short course at the Christian Brothers College in Memphis which dealt with world food problems and came up with the idea for a seminar on the subject.

Elick and Orr plan to attend another session next month in Memphis dealing with the same subject. Elick said, "We plan to report on excerpts from this seminar at Southern to our colleagues at the Memphis session."

Tow-away zone established

Due to a parking problem that has developed, a restricted access tow-away zone has been established behind the Billingsly Student Center, according to John Miller, director of security.

"We have had a lot of problems with people parking behind the BSC. Only three groups should be parking behind the BSC," said Miller.

"The student services personnel, the staff that work at the BSC, and the delivery service should be the only ones using that area," said Miller.

The new tow-away zone will be in effect from 7:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., said Miller. Miller also said that all reserved parking spaces are reserved for 24 hours and should not be used at all.

Vehicles towed away are to be impounded and will only be released after the tow fee and fine are paid.

The tow fee is $20.

"We made an extensive effort to stop people from parking there," said Miller. "We wrote letters, ticketed cars, but this is our last resort."

However, Miller said that if for some special reason access were needed that a temporary permit would be issued.

"We take some special things into consideration, not all, but quite a few," said Miller.

Automotive classes solicit repair jobs

Work is being solicited by the Automotive Electrical and Emissions Control classes at Missouri Southern.

Tune-ups, charging, starting, fuel systems, electrical problems, and oil leaks are the areas in which the class will be working.

Jim Holmes, instructor of automotive technology, said that although they will not be able to fix all problems they will be diagnosed properly. He also said that it may take a little longer than it would at any other shop but it will be done correctly.

The charge for work done on the car is minimal. There will be one dollar charged per labor hour plus the cost of parts.

Persons wishing to have work performed on their car should contact Jim Holmes at ext. 277 between the hours of 9-11 a.m. and 1-3 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Ipock initiated into national honorary

Betty Dickman Ipock, director of the department of nursing at Southern, has been inducted into Gamma Upsilon Chapter of Sigma Theta Tau, the national honor society for nursing.

The Big Bust

This is another in a series of guest columns on economic viewpoints from Students in Free Enterprise Alumni Division. This column is by Laura Spaeth, Southern student in marketing and management. This is part one of a three part series.

By Laura Spaeth

The 1920s were lively, optimistic and lucrative. Many thought it would never end, but on Oct. 29, 1929 it did—with a record-breaking 16,410,030 sales on the New York Stock Exchange. Stock prices plummeted while speculators were wiped out left and right. The big bubble had burst, leaving the nation and the world in a state of shock.

What happened? Things had been going great. Profits had soared as had prices. The volume of trading in stocks had increased again and again in the past nine years breaking record after record. More and more people found their way into a new rich class that offered wealth unheard of previously.

It was a precarious wealth, an unsteady, volatile bubble. Most of the stock market business had been on margin. Money was easy to get and the margin percentage was low. This encouraged a bull market never before so speculative.

According to some, the story starts in 1927 with "an act of generous but ill-advised internationalism." (Quoting John Kenneth Galbraith in his book The Great Crash.) Three prominent, foreign bankers had traveled to the United States to talk the Federal Reserve into lowering the rediscount rate so that trading in this country would be easier for them.

THE EXCESS MONEY that subsequently poured into the economy caused people to gorge the stock market with activity. Gains of 20 points in individual stocks became commonplace. The big men of business and Wall Street encouraged the boom and even worked together to push the market up in the opinion of many historians. Phenomenal increases in trading on margin continued with New York banks assuming most of the risks. Speculation was wild.

Perhaps a few saw what was coming as 1929 began. But, who would want to take the blame for the collapse that was coming? Certainly not the Federal Reserve.

In 1929 the Federal Reserve Board was not the most effective group in the country. In fact, it has been considered rather incompetent. When the crash came, the Federal Reserve decided to sit back and wait. When the economy continued its disastrous downward spiral, they decided (wrongly, it is now clear) that they were helpless. In fact, they had several options open to them and they determined to do something.

ONE POSSIBILITY for halting the collapse involved asking Congress for the power to set margin requirements. The Board finally did receive this power, but not until 1934. Early in 1929 the margins were around 45 to 50 percent. An increase would have brought many speculators around to facing reality. Milton Friedman offers another solution which might have worked. The Fed could have simply increased the money supply to member banks to halt the growing belief of the public that there was no money.

The total amount of money in the economy fell by one-third between 1929 and 1933. This was the real cause of many bank failures and Friedman thinks it could have been easily prevented. In fact, the Federal Reserve Bank of New York recommended exactly this solution prior to the first major bank failure. The Federal Reserve Board, however, chose to do nothing. (Friedman is being quoted from his book Free to Choose.)

Could the Federal Reserve Board really have prevented or at least halted the Great Depression? What were the other forces behind the crash? Could Presidents Coolidge and Hoover really have been so blind to the dangers of the boom and overspeculation? Some of the nation's best minds have attempted to answer these questions. Milton Friedman and John Kenneth Galbraith, for example. Both of these men lean toward the idea that the Fed could have been more instrumental in cushioning the blow that finally came. Both feel that proper Federal Reserve policies could have prevented it in the first place.

Day Care

Story and pictures by
Clark Swanson

Three women become the mother to sometimes as many as 20 children on any given morning. Their 20 start arriving at about 8 a.m. and some won't leave until 5:30 p.m. While the children's natural mother is off working the three care for them; logically, they give them day care.

The institution of day care has grown in leaps and bounds over the years. While Gail Priddy and her crew care for a relatively small number of children each day, their service is needed, nonetheless.

Priddy and her helpers hold their day care services in the EMC Building, which sponsors the service. Furthermore, several Missouri Southern students leave their off-spring in the facility while attending classes during the day.

And like students, the children have a structured program which they follow each morning and afternoon.

In the morning, for about an hour, the children have a free play period. Mostly they romp, they tromp, and almost always a few will push a truck around, doing things young children do best.

Yet this freedom won't last long. After play for the hour, they form into lines—one line for boys and one line for girls—behind leaders and head to the wash room to clean up for an early morning snack.

During the morning meal the children are usually served some type of fruit and a glass of fruit juice.

After this, the children start school. Divided by age, three different groups in all, the children start learning the fundamental rules of education in their own classrooms.

Next comes lunch.

After lunch the process starts all over again except this time there is a nap thrown in for about an hour.

For the women working there, keeping up with the children is sometimes a problem, but not always. And they, like mothers, have to change a few diapers.

But when one of Priddy's assistants is ill, her husband shows up to give a helping hand. Although it is not regular work, he likes it just the same.

And although the children like the day care service they receive, when mother comes, it is time for them to leave—quickly.

The word is trust

Recently a vote of confidence was taken by the MSSC-NEA on Missouri Southern's three central administrators, the president of the college, the vice-president for academic affairs, and the vice-president for business affairs. In the voting all three administrators received a vote of no-confidence.

Although the meaning of this vote is quite clear, that the majority of those 109 voting held no-confidence in the three administrators, the overall meaning is not so clear.

The question is one of words. Is it that those who voted no-confidence on the ballots felt that the three administrators could no longer run the college in an orderly fashion, or is it a question of trust; that the faculty voting for no-confidence felt they could no longer trust the administrators to work for the best interests of the faculty?

Only those faculty members voting can reveal their reasons for voting, thus answering the question at hand.

In many ways this question is not more than begging the issue. For no matter, the results remain the same.

But the question of trust is one of importance. Several times faculty members have stated that they can no longer trust the administration. And possibly the administration feels it can no longer trust the faculty.

Without trust of some type the problems now existing cannot be remedied.

Yet if the existing problems are not solved how much longer will it be before the students, the legislature, and the community lose trust in the college? And that is when the real problems will start.

Honoring the best

For the second year, students at Missouri Southern will have the opportunity to reward those instructors who are dearest to them. Once again the Outstanding Teaching Awards will be presented to two Missouri Southern faculty members, one for the outstanding instructor of a freshman class, and the other for the outstanding teacher.

Students should be encouraged to submit nominations for these awards. Basically, it is the means by which faculty can be singled out as being truly outstanding in their profession, the teaching profession.

Too often students take college, and those who teach at colleges, for granted. These awards are a way by which students can show their thanks, their admiration for a job well done.

Yet the awards are as important to the faculty members receiving them as they should be to the students. Under normal circumstances faculty members would be receiving a pay increase, and possibly a merit pay increase. However, this is not possible due to budgetary problems. Yet the Outstanding Teaching Awards are a means by which instructors can be rewarded. One must recall the pleasure obtained by being chosen as the best by one's peers and those whom he or she serves.

But students should take vested interest in these awards for they are awarded on the basis of teaching ability. And since students are exposed to more teaching than anyone else that comes to mind, they should be aware of those who are truly outstanding.

CLARK SWANSON: It's a matter of faith and finding it

By Clark Swanson

Faith, I have found, is like a murder trial—you really don't know until the jury foreman reads the verdict whether you'll live or die; yet like a murder trial you'll never find out if your faith was justified until it is too late.

There are many kinds of faith, faith in love, faith in God, faith in one's self, faith in money, etc., but nonetheless they do exist in the minds of some.

One thing bothers me about faith: basically, what if the item I hold faith in is false. One can only have faith, I guess.

A DEAR FRIEND sat with me one evening discussing this same matter. Well, not really. Quietly, while listening to "Moonlight in Vermont", we expressed the sorrow we both had when our first great loves turned us away at the door. Broken faith; lost loves; forgotten hopes.

My friend had decided that this rejection would jar his faith in love, he would continue to love someone and it really didn't matter to him who. I myself reserved opinion for a later date.

That is the problem with faith I believe; it always bites you in the back sometime, somewhere, somehow.

I GUESS, though, we all need to believe in something if it only be ourselves.

Christian faith is what really bothers me. Say, for example, I devoted my life to the priesthood only to die and find no pearly gates, or no God for that matter. I just wouldn't know what to say or think for that matter; I'd be disappointed.

Yet why should I be writing this for we all, in our personal lives, have experienced broken faith. The best way to describe the feeling, for those who haven't participated in such a travesty, is to say it's like a hangover, you feel terrible; there is nothing you can do to ease the pain, and the only way to get rid of it is to out-out-sleep it.

JULIAN BOND: Learn those names now, Mr. Clark

By Julian Bond

What would you think of a football coach who didn't know the names of his players?

Or a general who didn't know the name of the opposing army?

Or a diplomat who didn't know the names of the world leaders with whom his country must deal?

Not much, right?

SADLY, there is such a diplomat. He is William P. Clark, Jr., the former California Supreme Court judge who recently became this country's deputy secretary of state.

The deputy secretary is the No. 2 man in the federal department that sets and enforces U.S. foreign policy. One minimal requirement for that post ought to be knowing the names of the heads of important foreign governments.

So, it came as a great shock to hear Clark admit to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that he did not know the names of the prime ministers of South Africa and Zimbabwe.

CLARK'S IGNORANCE apparently does not end at Africa's borders. He frankly admitted to the senators that he knew little or nothing about the rest of the world. Probably he is aware that the Japanese make cars and television sets and that the French make postcards and wine.

Unfortunately, Clark is not alone.

Most Americans do not know the names of African heads of state.

Most Americans do not know the difference between Cairo and Cape Town, between Milton Obote and Idi Amin, between Senegal and Sierra Leone.

MOST OF US do not have to be experts on Africa. But the secretary of state should at least know the names of the continent's major figures.

He should know because one African country, Nigeria, is our second leading supplier of oil.

He should know because Africa is an important source of minerals and other raw materials as well as a growing market for U.S. goods.

He should know because events in Southern Africa threaten to erupt into a racial war.

DURING HIS PRESIDENTIAL campaign, Ronald Reagan revealed that he did not know much more about Africa than does Clark. The new president and his advisers seem to view Africans as dispensable pawns in an ideological struggle between the United States and the Soviet Union.

But Africa's problems are not caused by Soviet subversion. They stem, instead, from centuries of exploitation and domination by the faded colonial powers of Europe.

Africa's problems can only be solved by international assistance in which the United States can play a leading role.

SOME OF REAGAN'S ADVISERS have suggested that aid to Africa be sharply cut. Others have said that surplus U.S. food sent to hungry nations—many of them in Africa—should be used as a weapon to starve the unfriendly into America's arms.

These policies are not calculated to win friends and influence people either here or abroad.

After all, more than 10 percent of the U.S. population has African roots. And every American has a stake in Africa's peaceful development, in ending racist repression, dictatorship, starvation and war.

Mr. Clark, the prime minister of South Africa is P.W. Botha. His is the country in which the white minority denies the black majority every human right. It is also the country whose troops regularly invade Angola and Mozambique.

THE PRIME MINISTER OF ZIMBABWE is Robert Mugabe. His is the country that used to be called Rhodesia. Mugabe is the man who waged a guerilla war against the country's white-minority regime and won a free election over the objections of many of the people in and around the Reagan State Department.

These two men are enemies, Mr. Clark, but was wants to be our friend. We can't be friendly with both for long, so you will have to help the president and the secretary of state decide between the two.

Study the situation. Learn more names and places. Read some history.

As a former judge, you are used to making decisions based on the facts. If you learn the facts, you will have to decide that the United States should stand in favor of freely elected governments and against racist dictatorships.

But please, Mr. Clark, learn those names!

Retired professor chastizes editor for immaturity

Dear Editor-in-Chief:

The President of MSSC has been courteous enough to place me—along with other retired professors—on the mailing list of the Chart. When I received his letter telling me I had been so honored, I looked forward to the first copy with great eagerness. I must admit I was somewhat taken aback at the left wing approach I found it presenting, particularly the "Julian Bond" coverage. But I thought, "What the heck, this is just the first issue...." Now I have the second copy. I have done enough research to realize that one is foolish to generalize from a small sample, but again I find your Editorial Page with a left tilt to it. This is the first page I turn to in any paper. Again I found good old Julian Bond receiving top billing, along with the confession of the editor as to his immaturity which explains it.

Let me tell you, that we who live here in Georgia where we have Julian Bond in our legislature are not all that carried away with him. He remains in the legislature because he is from an area he pretty well controls, and not because he is a good public servant. He too is tilted too far left. On the other hand, Hosea Williams is A-OK.

From my limited observation of the Chart as it reflects your philosophies, and from your "confession" on the editorial page of the last issue, let me see if I can evaluate you further. You are strong for ERA, you approve of the Iranian revolution, you think Marx and Lenin were great social movers, you think the ACLU is the protector of the downtrodden, Dubois is one of your heroes, Julian Bond is the savior of the blacks, the Vietnam war was all wrong, the military is a waste of time, the Defense Budget should be cut in half to provide for money for the "poor," the draft is an invasion of our privacy or some such nonsense, you are entitled to a free ride in the Nation because you were born here, the environment is more important than progress. On a scale of 1 to 10, striking out any two of the above that you think are unfair, you may determine your degree of immaturity and left wing sympathy. I figure you will garner no less than an 8, and more likely a 10. But you will be surprised how much your point of view will change when you grow up.

If you, or any young man or woman, are seeking "maturity," I would recommend that you sign up for a stretch in any one of the Services of the Armed Forces. There maturity is forced upon you, if you are reluctant to accept it. But then you probably couldn't handle it.

I am sending along a copy of our school paper, "The Hitching Post." You might want to use it as a pattern for improving the Chart. We have a student body of 680 from the 6th thru the 12th grades—about 268 in the 9th thru the 12th, and we're 68 percent black. I have 112 NJROTC Cadets, and 105 are black. They are a great bunch, and I love them all. We have accomplished a lot in my three years here. So don't paint me with a brush that says "racial bias." But I am conservative, having made a rational shift from my earlier points of view which I held when I was your age. I hope you will too. Good luck!

Sincerely,
Harold R. Willis
Professor of Psychology,
Ret.

Stretch, strain, grab, and groan. . .

Attention! Attention please!

In the second round of wrestling in Division 1, 43 pound weight class, we will have J. Leaks of Carl Junction against A. Davolt of Columbus.

The voice bellows over the public address system as the scorer announces another match. Boys and occasionally a girl, from first to eighth grade, ranging from 30 to over 115 pounds, stretch, strain, grab and groan on the mats of the pee-wee wrestling tournaments that have gained popularity in the area.

These tournaments attract an average of 20 teams from Missouri, Oklahoma, and Kansas.

The wrestlers are divided into division according to their year in school. Division 1 is first through third grade. Division 2 is fourth through sixth. Division 3 is seventh and eighth graders. After the divisions by age then the wrestlers are divided according to weight. The weight classes run from 30 pounds to the unlimited weight class which is above 115 pounds.

"WE HAVE REALLY started to develop the program for young wrestlers in the Missouri area," said Mike Cigala, Carl Junction wrestling coach. "The wrestling clubs in the area are still mainly in the pioneering stages. But the interest and the response at Carl Junction is very good and we are only in our fifth season."

Cigala believes in involving the parents as an integral part of a sound wrestling program. Before the season started, Cigala held conferences with the parents of his wrestlers to provide them with some information that would benefit their offspring in competition.

"The parents are very important to our program. I only get to work with the kids three nights a week; it's what is done at home that keeps the kids in the groove," said Cigala. "I make sure to discuss a diet plan with the parents to make sure they are not being fed junk food. I also give them a plan of workouts that they can do while they are at home."

DURING THE WEEK the squad of 50 boys get together for workouts that are held three times a week and last two hours a session.

"During our workouts we stress conditioning and mat technique very heavily. I believe in the wrestlers overlearning different techniques because during their matches these techniques will come naturally to the wrestler. I like to stress individuality to my wrestlers. I try to show them all the moves that I can and then it is up to the wrestler to develop a style that proves successful to him."

Tournaments for the pee-wee wrestlers take place almost every weekend in the surrounding area with miniature contestants mustering every ounce of strength that their small frames can produce as they strive to pin their foes and have their hands raised triumphantly in victory.

2-day Langston Hughes conference set

A two-day study conference on Langston Hughes and his works will be held March 13-14. It will be held in conjunction with the sixth annual Missouri Philological Association meeting, and both will take place on the third floor of the Billingsly Student Center.

Hughes was a poet, playwright, and novelist who wrote mainly about Negro life. A native of Joplin, Hughes was graduated from Lincoln University in Pennsylvania and went on to become one of America's literary greats.

THE CONFERENCE is the first of its kind done on Hughes. It will feature 19 different speakers from colleges and universities nationwide, and will focus on Hughes' overall contribution to American literature, present day criticism, and the teaching of his works at all educational levels.

Dr. Henry Harder and Dr. Henry Morgan, professor of English at Southern, organized the Hughes conference. The men began work two years ago and have received grants from the Missouri Committee for the Humanities and the National Endowment for the Humanities to finance the project.

"The Hughes conference will appeal to two audiences," Harder said. "First, the people with a professional interest in Black American literature who are travelling from all over the country to be here, and second the local public. This second group would include area teachers, and those that are interested in the history of the region."

ALSO AT HAND during the conference will be a publishers' book exhibit.

Over 20 publications will be on display and will follow the theme "The Black Experience." Order forms will be supplied for the purchase of any of the books.

Four sessions are planned for Friday, March 13. The opening address will begin at 9 a.m. and features Therman B. O'Daniel of Morgan State University, the executor of Hughes' estate. The other morning session begins at 10:15, and the afternoon sessions will begin at 1:15 and 3:30. A banquet is scheduled for 6:30 p.m. with a social convocation afterwards.

The first session on Saturday, March 14, will begin at 8:15, and the last session will begin at 10:15. The last session is titled "Hughes Studies: Where Are We Now?" and will be a panel discussion synopsis of Hughes' present position in American literature.

Anyone may attend the conference, and there will be no admission fee.

ATTUNED TO THOSE with professional or pre-professional English interests, the Missouri Philological Association will begin the first of its three sessions at 8:30 Friday morning, March 13. Dr. Jimmy C. Couch, assistant professor of English at Southern, coordinated this event. The MPA will present approximately 70 speakers, and programs will be available for the time and place of each speaker.

Philology is the scientific study of written records, chiefly literary works, to determine their meaning in terms of their linguistic and cultural history.

For more information on either event, programs are available now at the English department on the third floor of Hearnes Hall.

Auditions open in studio plays

The second series of Studio '81 plays will hold auditions at Missouri Southern beginning Monday. Auditions will be held at 11 a.m. and 4 p.m. Monday and 4:00 p.m. Tuesday in Taylor Performing Arts Center.

Try-outs are open for everybody in the community. Those wishing to audition may bring a prepared two to three minute reading or use material provided at the try-out.

The plays or scenes to be cast are 27 Wagonloads of Cotton by Tennessee Williams, The Sandbox by Edward Albee, Sham by Frank Thompson, Catch-22 by Joseph Heller, and Antigone by Sophocles.

Tomorrow is Mexican buffet

Tomorrow is "South of the Border Day" for faculty and staff. A Mexican buffet at $2.50 per person will be served from 11:30 a.m. until 1 p.m. in the Connor Ballroom on the third floor of the Billingsly Student Center.

Dick Keezer will entertain on the piano from 11:30-12:15, and Mike Gondro will entertain on the guitar from 12:30-1 p.m.

The menu will include tacos, enchiladas, burritos, refried beans, Spanish rice, avocado salad, dessert, and drink.

No reservations are required for the event being planned by Ray Steele, food service manager, and Kathy Lay, coordinator of student activities.

German chamber orchestra to perform

The Southwest German Chamber Orchestra with Paul Angerer conducting and Michael Ponti as piano soloist will perform at 8 p.m. Tuesday March 10 in Taylor Auditorium. Admission to the concert is free for Missouri Southern students on the presentation of their student IDs. The concert is on the Community Concert Series and is open to others only by season membership.

Southern students are always admitted free to all Community Concert programs because of the college's participation in the total program.

THE SOUTHWEST German Chamber

Orchestra has achieved an international reputation through its concert tours of Europe, Latin America, and now the United States. Critics have hailed their "effortless balance of elegance and passion" and proclaim them "one of Germany's finest ensembles." [Munich Neue Musikzeitung]

The ensemble, composed of 17 musicians, has performed at major music festivals throughout Europe and has made countless radio and television appearances. The orchestra has also recorded numerous albums. Paul Angerer has been conductor since 1971 and has expanded the ensemble's repertoire into the romantic and contemporary periods. Under him the orchestra has toured Italy, Spain, and Great Britain.

Angerer studied and played the viola before becoming conductor of the Vienna Chamber Orchestra. He then spent five years as head of opera at the Salzburg Landestheater and became conductor of the Southwest German Chamber Orchestra.

THE NEW YORK TIMES has called Michael Ponti "a supervirtuoso" and his world-wide concert appearances have established him as one of the most important pianists of his time. Since 1968 he

A Gift to the Streets

Miniature homes, churches, business places, along with over 90 photographs taken by Carol Olwell make up the exhibit "Gift to the Street: Patternbooks of Victorian Architecture" currently on display at the Spiva Art Center. The exhibit illustrates the ornamental and structural variety of Victorian houses across the United States. The display was organized by the Smithsonian Institution Traveling Exhibition Services (SITE) and will be on display without charge until March 5.

Pam Brisby led the Lady Lions in scoring this season with 566 points.

Season ends on sour note as Lady Lions drop final 2

Two wins for the Lady Lions two weeks ago were overshadowed as Southern ended its basketball season on a sour note. Southern was handed two losses by Kearney State 79-73 Friday and Fort Hays State 102-86 Saturday.

Coach G.I. Willoughby's squad finished the year with a 10-19 overall record. They were 4-10 in the Central States Intercollegiate Conference, a last-place tie with Wayne State.

At Kearney, the Lady Lions played a tight game but ran into foul trouble. Lisa Mitchell and Mary Carter both fouled out and Pam Brisby collected three fouls in the first half and her fourth in the second. "Brisby and Mitchell became tired without backups," said Willoughby. "Therefore, their movement was sluggish. You tend to move your arms instead of your feet and this causes fouls."

Southern took to the road shorthanded. Senior Pat McKay was left at home for disciplinary reasons and Nina Bakke couldn't make the trip because of her ailing father.

TAKING THE EARLY lead, the Lady Lions jumped out to a 9-4 advantage in the first three minutes of play. Brisby led the way with seven points in that time. Still trailing at 12:05, Kearney went on a rampage to turn the tables and lead 27-17 with 5:48 left.

The visiting Lady Lions got within three points, 31-28, with 2:20 left, but the Loperettes surged onward to open a 38-30 cushion at the intermission.

During the second half, Southern found themselves down by 13 points at 51-38 with 5:30 gone. They cut the deficit to six with 8:10 left, but could get no closer.

SCORING HONORS for Southern went to the 6-2 Brisby with 30 points. Reserve forward Linda Castillon had 14 and junior guard Brenda Pitts meshed 12 points. For Kearney, Cathy Weir led with 22 points.

Fort Hays' 5-8 forward Daran Frevert's 37 points dealt the Lions their second loss of the weekend on Saturday.

With 12 minutes left in the first half, the Tigerettes held a nine-point margin at 25-16. Fort Hays extended the lead, scoring eight straight points to take control of the game. Hays held a 20-point advantage at the half.

PITTS' excellent showing in the second half cut the Tigerettes' lead to 64-50 with 4:30 gone. She scored 20 of her 24 points after intermission. Fort Hays struck back, though, meshing 14 unanswered points.

Southern was down by 30 points with 11:22 remaining on the clock and could only get within 11 before they scored the last five points, leaving the final deficit at 16.

"When you score 86 points and still lose," said Willoughby, "you know that you are playing good ball. Fort Hays just had the hot hand. We even tried some different defenses—like double-teaming Frevert—but these were rendered ineffective."

BRISBY again led the Lady Lions, this time with 34 points. Castillon netted 12. Frevert's 37 points was a new school record for Hays. CSIC scoring leader Roberta Augustine had 14.

Though the Lions lost twice, the outstanding play of Brisby hailed her CSIC Player of the Week honors. She collected 64 points and 45 rebounds in the two games.

Final season statistics show Brisby holding two league second-place berths in scoring and rebounding. In scoring, her 19.5 average left her just one-tenth of a point behind Augustine. The rebounding title is held by Julie Petronis, but Brisby only falls two-tenths of a point behind her with an 11.5 average. Pitts led the conference in assists with 111. Mitchell and Patti Killian were among the leaders in other categories.

Lions roar back; win over Hays and get crown

In one of the school's greatest comebacks, Missouri Southern overcame a 21-point deficit to shock Fort Hays State's nationally ranked Tigers 84-77 Saturday night.

Rated second in the NAIA, Fort Hays had their 26-game home-court winning streak snapped. The Lions ended Central States Intercollegiate Conference action with a 12-2 mark and their second championship in the last four years. Southern finished its regular season with a 21-9 record.

"That was the best comeback," said Coach Chuck Williams, "by any team I've ever seen. Sportscaster Don Gross called it the best one in Southern's history. It was as good a small college game as you could want. We showed a lot of heart and character."

WITH A STANDING-ROOM-ONLY crowd of 7,500 vocal fans cheering them on, Fort Hays pulled out to a 52-33 halftime advantage. Senior center Lionel Hamer had 11 points and forward Dino Larry had 10 to lead the hosts' early surge.

"Our play in the first half wasn't that poor," said Williams. "A five minute stretch late in the half was our undoing. We turned the ball over against their press, resulting in several quick baskets for Hays. I told our team at intermission that we needed to get our tempo back. At the ten-minute mark, I wanted us to have their lead cut in half."

Fort Hays opened its biggest margin, 56-35, with 1:51 gone in the second half. The Lions then scored 11 unanswered points to cut the deficit to 56-46 with 13:26 left. After Hays gained a 60-48 advantage, Southern scored 16 straight points to go on top 64-60 with 4:48 remaining.

"WE WERE CONTROLLING the tempo, moving the ball around and getting good shots," said Williams. "We only missed eight shots in the second half. Also, our defense started giving them problems. We forced them to shoot from the outside."

Southern held nine-point leads at 72-63 and 74-65. Senior guard Kenn Stoechner also gave the Lions a nine-point cushion after his two free throws with six seconds left.

Percy Brown, 6-4 junior forward, led the victorious effort with 18 points. He also had eight rebounds as Southern claimed a 32-26 margin on the boards. Stoechner added 14 points, as did freshman guard Carl Tyler. Senior center Paul Merrifield chipped in with 10 points.

"PAUL AND RICKY Caver (eight points) did a good job coming off the bench," said Williams. "Our bench made a big contribution. They kept the encouragement going to our starters."

Senior guards Max Hamblin and Mark Wilson paced the Tigers with 17 and 16 points, respectively. Hamer added 15 points before being ejected late in the game. "The Hammer" attempted to slug Merrifield with a forearm blow in a battle for rebound position. Larry scored 10 points and pulled down six rebounds for Fort Hays, now 26-3 overall and 10-3 in the CSIC.

Late in the game, someone in the crowd threw a whiskey bottle at Tyler before his free throw attempt. "I wanted a technical called on the crowd," said Williams. "I felt that there were grounds for the call because one of our players could have been injured. The man on the public address system warned the fans. I was also concerned what would happen after the game. We left the court with a few seconds remaining to avoid any trouble."

SOUTHERN'S VICTORY was its second over Fort Hays this season. The Lions defeated the then-No. 1 ranked Tigers 91-73 on Jan. 30 in Joplin. That was Hays' first loss after 22 straight victories.

Kearney State had put Southern's title hopes in doubt Friday night by crushing the Lions 90-59. The Antelopes ended CSIC play Tuesday night with an 11-3 mark, one game behind the league-leading Lions. Kearney finished 22-6 overall.

Said Williams, "We simply did not play well. Our trying too hard was the case. We put too much pressure on ourselves and were thinking about winning the conference. Kearney has a very fine team."

THE ANTELOPES scored 10 unanswered points to open a 20-8 bulge with 11:02 left in the first half. Kearney led 39-21 at halftime. In the second half, the 'Lopers opened 48-27 and 62-34 advantages.

Southern's starters combined for a mere 21 points. They hit only nine of 41 shots from the field and three of nine charity tosses. Reserves LeRoy Oliver and Tyler were high scorers with eight points apiece.

"Our shooting was off early," said Williams. "The harder we tried, the worse things went. We had to regroup quickly for Saturday's game. The players wanted to prove they could play better."

Soccer Lions name Tri-captains

Missouri Southern Soccer Coach Dr. Hal Bodon has announced that Joe Macken, Mark Ruzicka, and Craig Bernheimer have been elected tri-captains for the upcoming soccer season.

Macken is a senior fullback from Kansas City. He has been part of the defense the last two years.

In his freshman season he was awarded rookie of the year honors. Last year he received honorable mention in the District.

Ruzicka is a senior midfielder from St. Louis. He follows in the footsteps of his brother Rick Ruzicka as a captain and midfielder at Southern. Last year he received second team All-District selection.

Bernheimer is a senior forward from Tulsa. He scored four goals last season and had three assists. Bernheimer will have to adjust this spring to playing midfield. Coach Hal Bodon is switching to the 4-4-2 system of play and is moving Bernheimer back to the midfield position.

Bodon is also planning on moving forward Alberto Escobar and Jeff Cindrich to the midfield to fill the extra position created by the new system.

The amateur soccer team, the Coca Cola Stars that consists of many Southern players, will open its season at 2 p.m. March 7 against the Kansas City Strikers.

Our win at Fort Hays Saturday gives us a positive approach for the playoffs."

The Lions won the Central States Intercollegiate Conference championship with their victory Saturday. Fort Hays and Kearney State tied for second place with 11-3 marks, one game behind Southern. The Lions take a 21-9 overall record into the playoff game. Avila has never defeated Southern, last losing to them in the 1978 district playoffs.

SAID WILLIAMS, "I'm extremely happy for our players for winning the conference championship. As a coach, I hope to be involved in more championships. But this was the last opportunity for the seniors on the team."

Southern is expected to start its usual alignment of Randy Goughnour and Kenn Stoechner at guards, Percy Brown and Skip Taylor at forwards, and Jerry Wilson at the center position against Avila. Brown leads the scoring parade with 341 points, or 12.2 per game. Reserve forward Ricky Caver is next with 304 points, followed by Stoechner with 303. Wilson leads the rebounding department with 241, an average of eight per game. Brown trails with 179. Goughnour and Stoechner lead in assists with 135 and 130, respectively.

Advance tickets for Saturday's game will be on sale from 10 a.m. until 2 p.m. Friday at the Young Gymnasium ticket office. Playoff tickets are priced at $4 for adult general admission and $2 for students with ID cards.

It will be 'Green and Gold Day'

Saturday was proclaimed "Green and Gold Day" by Southern's Student Senate in a meeting last night.

Senate said this is a way to promote spirit and pay tribute to Southern's "number one" basketball team.

Everyone is asked to wear green and gold while attending the game.

Also, at 1:30 p.m. Saturday the Senate will meet in the gym to decorate and make spirit posters. All students are invited to help.

One item of business cleared by the Senate was a rumor that Kappa Alpha fraternity was to have its charter revoked, the reason being that the Senate was not properly recognized on publicity for the Muscular Dystrophy Dance-a-Thon the KA's with the help of the Senate are to hold. The KA's explained to the Senate that they needed the money the Senate appropriated to them before any publicity could be given.

Campus Beautification Committee asked the Senate for $2,000 to help Southern pay for a park to be constructed in the front of Billingsly Student Center. The College is funding approximately $3,000 of the estimated $5,000 project.

Benches, trash receptacles, and some type of monument were among the list of items to be bought with Senate's money. No decision has been made by the Senate to appropriate the money.
